Report of the Board of Health.

TO THE SELECTMEN AND CITIZENS OF THE TOWN OF EPPING :

In making our report and recommendations at this time, there is one thing that needs to be impressed upon the householders and house occupiers with all the force that we are capable of expressing in these few lines. Our investigations during the last year lead us to believe that so long as all goes on serenely no one cares a whit about how his cellar is drained or where the refuse from kitchen and out-house finds its way, but let once contagion and death come in sight, and the Board of Health must bear all the blame and repair all the dangerous places. We are satisfied that bad drainage has had much to do with the meningitis cases that have proved so fatal to the small patients afflicted. Now the Board stands ready to give its best aid and advice to any asking therefor, but we have no funds at our disposal to remedy defects. So each owner or occupant of house or tenement must perforce see to it that their premises are kept neat and clean, if they want to escape those diseases that come to us or are aggravated by filth and uncleanness.

We have investigated every case that has come to our official notice, and some besides, and have tried to help in the removal of all evil nesting places that we came across. Sanitary inspections are needed in our village every spring and fall, and the Board would be only too glad if the householders would invite our oversight. We hold ourselves at the instant call of the public, and are at all times ready to answer any call that may be handed in.

During the past year there have been 43 cases of measles, 1 membranous croup, 2 diphtheria, 11 of crebro spinal meningitis, and 1 of scarlet fever.

Respectfully submitted,

A. C. BUSWELL,
GEORGE A. GILMORE,
A. W. MITCHELL.

Report of the Superintendent of Schools.

TO THE SCHOOL BOARD OF EPPING :

Gentlemen :—I herewith submit my second annual report, the fifth in the series of superintendent's reports to the school committee of this town.

One year ago we were running five outside schools and employing five teachers for the village schools, including the High school. Beginning with the Spring term of 1905 the School Board voted to close the Red Oak Hill and North Epping schools and provide transportation for those pupils to the village schools. While this may have proven a hardship for one or two children, the majority are greatly benefited thereby. They have gained both the advantage of grade work and the enthusiasm which comes from numbers.

The School Board have gone farther. Believing that environment has much to do toward one's education, they began a much needed transformation of the district property. At considerable time and expense the grounds at the High school building have been put in first class condition. Plans are on foot to make a like improvement at the Primary building.

These two buildings are at present unsatisfactorily heated by box stoves. The heating is spasmodic and uneven. I trust the time is not far distant when the Primary building may either be attached to the High school building or disposed of and wings added to the High school for the lower grades. Then with either a steam or hot water plant the heating problem would be solved and your town would have a central school building second to none in this vicinity.

The year's work has gone smoothly. There has been a decided steady advance in the mental development of the children. The change in the course of study adopted by the Board has intensified the work and created interest on the part of the pupils. While years are necessary before the full fruits of the change will be realized, yet one can thus early note improvement.

The power that makes the schools go is the sentiment which exists in the community in favor of them. If it is hearty and intelligent, the schools will do much for the children. If this interest and sympathy are lacking, they will fall but little short of failure. I trust parents will take this seriously. For when parents show personal interest and sympathy with the schools the most serious of school problems are more than half solved.

WORK OF THE SCHOOLS.

Reading, spelling, writing, and the simple rules of arithmetic are usually classed as educational "tools," because every pupil must be provided with these accomplishments before he is able to carry on his work in any of the usual school studies. These fundamentals therefore are of first importance.

With this in view, during the past year we have made reading our objective; later in the year oral expression in arithmetic was coupled with the reading. We felt that these subjects must be enriched, by leading the pupils to see through the symbols to that for which the symbols stand. Thought is the main thing in mathematics, as well as in reading. In either of these branches one may play with symbols or work with symbols, and not think. "Thinking is discerning relations." In mathematics the things related are magnitudes. Leave these out—juggle with mere figures—and the subject is impoverished; put them in and the subject is enriched. Our children are beginning to learn that reading is not pronunciation of words, but is thought getting; that examples are not given simply that they may get the answers to them. The symbols are beginning to have a fascination for them, as is evidenced by the voluntary outside reading they have done the last half of the year. We are anxious to couple with the reading and arithmetic oral and written expression as our main objectives for the coming year.

"It will be well for the schools when we realize that some of the old-fashioned things were good things in their day and would be helpful in these days. If we had more mental arithmetic; if the pupils did more of their own work; if they were able to analyze some of the English classics in such a way as to understand their thought and appreciate their beauties, we should be doing some things much better than we are doing them at present."

The average attendance in all the schools of the town for the fiscal year ending August 1st, 1905, is eighty-seven per cent.

This record of attendance is by no means as high as it should be. During the past winter and spring terms the percentage of absences has been unusually high, on account of much sickness, partly the usual minor diseases of childhood, partly colds grip and measles, due to the severe winter weather, or to careless exposure or other avoidable causes. Yet sickness accounts for only about two thirds of the entire number of absences. Bad weather is given as a reason for a certain number, chiefly among the younger children; and there are other good and sufficient reasons. But the fact remains that many children are allowed to absent themselves from school for reasons which their employer, were they at work instead of at school, would not tolerate for a moment. Parents ought to understand more clearly that to allow any but the most weighty causes to interfere with the punctual and regular attendance of a child at school is an injustice to the child himself; first, because it deprives him of a part of the education which it is his right to have, and secondly because it encourages the pernicious habit of neglect of duty. The most important lesson that the school can teach is that of attention to duty at the time set for duty. For to a child school is business, and in the world of business, as the child must learn sooner or later, business has the right of way.

CONCLUSION.

The highest function of the school is character building. That teacher fails grievously who does not help her pupils to see that hateful words, unkind acts and untruthful statements injure, to an alarming extent, those who indulge in these vices. It should be made clear to the children that the most of their unhappiness will be caused by the injustice and suffering they inflict upon others. It is important that they learn while young, that he who is generous in thought and deed to add to the joys and prosperity of others, will receive greater blessings than he bestows.

The teacher will do a great service for the children if she leads them to see that altruism brings happiness and that selfishness ends in misery, Isn't this, after all, the thing which is worth while? I append Principal F. T. Johnson's report.

Respectfully submitted,

W. B. SPRAGUE, Superintendent of Schools.

TO THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS:

The condition of the High school has remained wholesome and gradually progressive throughout the year. Having lost three by graduation, and only two being promoted from the Grammar grade last June, our number of pupils remains practically the same as last year. Acting on the advice of our Superintendent, the School Board decided to remodel our curriculum of study by eliminating some studies not essential for preparation for college, and thus enable more time to be put on the necessary studies and a longer recitation period thereby gained. Also in promoting from the old course to the new, the studies were so graded that while in many cases the pupils continued to take up advance work, yet there was no promotion of classes, and thereby the standard of the school was raised by nearly a year's work. It has been the aim of school officers and the teachers to make the work less extensive and more intensive. We have aimed to give a thorough course of instruction along five lines of work, viz.: English, French, History, Latin, and Mathematics, and we feel gratified to anticipate that when our pupils shall have finished this course of study they will be prepared to enter college. We also have confidence that with energetic effort on the part of teachers, with hearty co-operation of school officers, with earnest endeavors on the part of the pupils, and with a generous appropriation from our citizens for needed apparatus and reference books, our efforts will be crowned next June by having our High school placed on the list of approved High schools of New Hampshire.

Respectfully submitted,

FREDERICK T. JOHNSON, Principal.
